Citing Sources – MLA Style

To avoid plagiarism, you must give credit whenever you use

- another person’s idea, opinion, or theory;
- any facts, statistics, graphs, drawings—any pieces of information—that are not common knowledge;
- quotations of another person’s actual spoken or written words; or
- paraphrase of another person’s spoken or written words.

Strategies for Avoiding Plagiarism

1. Put in quotations everything that comes directly from the text especially when taking notes.
2. Paraphrase, but be sure you are not just rearranging or replacing a few words.

   Instead, read over what you want to paraphrase carefully; cover up the text with your hand, or close the text so you can’t see any of it (and so aren’t tempted to use the text as a “guide”). Write out the idea in your own words without peeking.

3. Check your paraphrase against the original text to be sure you have not accidentally used the same phrases or words, and that the information is accurate.

Terms You Need to Know

Common knowledge: facts that can be found in numerous places and are likely to be known by a lot of people.

   Example: John F. Kennedy was elected President of the United States in 1960.
This is generally known information. You do not need to document this fact.

However, you must document facts that are not generally known and ideas that interpret facts.

   Example: According the American Family Leave Coalition’s new book, Family Issues and Congress, President Bush’s relationship with Congress has hindered family leave legislation (6).

The idea that “Bush’s relationship with Congress has hindered family leave legislation” is not a fact but an interpretation; consequently, you need to cite your source.

Quotation: using someone’s words. When you quote, place the passage you are using in quotation marks, and document the source according to a standard documentation style.

The following example uses the Modern Language Association’s style:

   Example: According to Peter S. Pritchard in USA Today, “Public schools need reform but they’re irreplaceable in teaching all the nation’s young” (14).

Paraphrase: using someone’s ideas, but putting them in your own words. This is probably the skill you will use most when incorporating sources into your writing. Although you use your own words to paraphrase, you must still acknowledge the source of the information.

What do you notice about the highlighted phrase? What function(s) do you think it serves?

One problem caused by illegal parking is that it can be dangerous for other students to drive around the parking lots. A Daily Cougar article states, "It's frustrating," said junior theatre major Tiffani Fuller. 'There are a lot of people who park at the ends of the lanes, and the men in blue don't seem to be doing anything about it. You have to turn slowly at the end of the aisle so you don't run into the side of a double-parked car, and there are sometimes backups" (Halphen).
Good academic writing requires more than just documenting information correctly—you also need to be able to work this material in smoothly.

The most basic way to do this is to use attributive tags, which are phrases that attribute the words and/or ideas to the source.

Since you are using in-text citations already, these tags are not necessary for documentation purposes, although they can sometimes replace the need for the citation. Instead, they are a way to provide a break between your own ideas and someone else’s, as well as to influence your audience’s reaction to the source material.

This is a chart of several basic types of attributive tags.

Underline the phrase in the examples that relates to the PURPOSE as stated in the second column. The first one is done for you.

Practice in text citations

1. Embed a portion of the following quotation in a sentence using the appropriate citation. Make up a page number for this exercise.

   “Students can expect to find a wider variety of options available to them at college than they had in high school. They really have no idea what opportunities exist in the big wide world. The possibilities are endless.”

   Smith, Snuffy. How to Go to College. Cleveland: Jones, 2005.

2. Embed a portion of the following quote by introducing the author first and giving appropriate citation at the end of the quote. (Note: for the purposes of this worksheet, you may assume where the quotation came from within the page range given for each example.)

   “Students who select colleges because of the potential for partying are often sadly disappointed when it comes time for them to actually begin a career. Most workplaces don’t have that many parties”

3. Embed two or more sections of this quote in a passage you might write and give appropriate citation by using the ellipsis (...) to indicate the quotation has been abbreviated.

   “Life, like any paper topic, neatly divides itself into three major categories—pre-college, college and post-college—each of which is determined primarily by the peculiar fears that dominate that stage. Of course, those unfortunates who never go to college are condemned to live out their impoverished lives experiencing only the pre-college and post-college stages.”

4. Embed a quotation from a work by two authors, citing it only at the end of the quote.

“If you are considering a career in law, English is actually one of the best majors to consider as an undergraduate. The skills you learn in logic and analysis transfer well to disputation.”

5. Embed elements of the same quote using the author’s names to introduce the quote.

6. Use portions of this quote and include the author and title to introduce the quote.

“Naturalists often run afoul of wildlife while in the field. I myself had my leg chewed off by a puma after falling asleep at lunch one day. Thinking back, I wish I hadn’t had such a large lunch that day.”

7. Paraphrase from the quote below and use an appropriate citation in a sentence of your own construction. (Paraphrase means to put the ideas of another person into your own words.)

“My most successful piece sold for $10,000. I showed it to this guy I was dating, and he was blown away that it had sold for so much because, to him, it looked like a scene of mud. I began showing in galleries while still in school.”

8. Embed a quotation from an interview that has no page number.

“I suggest that you study hard in college, but get a job too. Jobs teach much more than school ever does.”

9. Paraphrase from this quote from a presentation.

“The highest rated colleges this year are those specializing in technical fields. If you have skills in any area of technology, you can write your own ticket and work anywhere in the world.”

10. Paraphrase this quote from a video.

“I had a dual-major in communications and technology. When I was ready to graduate, I posted my resume on-line and got called for an interview the very next day.”

11. Cite a website from which you paraphrase a portion of the following quotation:

“Whatever you do for work in life, the most important thing to remember is not how much money you make or how big a title you have, it is whether you look forward to getting up in the morning and doing it again. Money can buy things; things can be replaced. Titles can be bought, which makes them simply things.”
Creating a ‘Works Cited’ page

Of course every paper must include a Works Cited page (formally known as the bibliography). The format is very prescriptive. That is there are certain rules that must be followed. And there are many, sometimes confusing, rules for the many different sources. Know, however, you must cite the following information as appropriate. Use the “Style Guide” (top right corner of our library’s red page) for generating correct “reference” lists.

- Author(s) name(s)
- Title of article, or chapter, or speech or web article
- Title of book, website, magazine, newspaper, journal, movie, TV broadcast
- City of publication
- Name of publisher
- Date of publication

Basic MLA Format (for a book)

Author's last name, Author's first name or initial. Title of Book in italics. City of publication: Publisher, Copyright year.
```

Example

Tips

- The first line of each citation should start at the left margin of the page, but each following line should be indented ½ inch. This is called a “hanging indent”
- Sources must be listed alphabetically by the first word in each citation (usually the author’s last name.) Set up your list in a 1-column table so you can add entries as you research then “sort” the list alphabetically. Set the table so the borders do not print.
- Names of books, magazines, academic journals, and newspapers should be either underlined or italicized,
- Double space the page.
